BUREAU OF STREET LIGHTING HOSTS CONSORTIUM

Attendees at the Municipal Solid State Street Lighting Consortium held at the Public Works building.

Bureau of Street Lighting Director Ed Ebrahimian hosted the U.S. Department of Energy (DOE) - Municipal Solid State Street Lighting (MSSL) Consortium-Southwest Region Workshop on September 30 at the Public Works Building. The MSSL Consortium was represented by Edward Smalley, Director of Seattle City Light in Washington.

Nearly 50 representatives from government and private agencies representing the lighting industry across the country were in attendance. This was an interactive event with informative presentations as well as input, questions and feedback from all participants.

The event consisted of speakers and presentations including one on Light Emitting Diodes (LED) streetlights by Ebrahimian and Street Lighting Engineer/Project Manager Orlando Nova.

The bureau is currently converting 140,000 City of Los Angeles streetlights to energy-efficient LED lights.
